Leading light goes dark for Earth Hour

April 3, 2014 by Steve Adams

Dubrovnik Sun Gardens before the lights were turned off!

Dubrovnik Sun Gardens has demonstrated its commitment to protecting and preserving the environment by taking part in Earth Hour, an internationally acknowledged and practiced event to raise awareness of our global carbon footprint.

As part of the event the resort, which is affiliated to The Registry Collection luxury exchange programme, went dark for an hour when all its lights were switched off from 20.30 – 21.30 on Saturday 29 March.

Momentous occasion

Staff, guests and residents were all involved in the momentous initiative, which was rolled out across all guestrooms, apartments and public areas.

To mark the occasion the resort also hosted an atmospheric, candlelit evening, complete with dinner at its Tartufo restaurant, which offers views across the Adriatic and imposing Elafiti Islands.

Earth Hour is a global initiative that urges cities around the world to take a leadership role in the global transition to a low carbon economy, and by partaking, Sun Gardens, Dubrovnik solidifies its claim as a bastion of luxury hospitality in Croatia.
