THE GREEN ISLAND - MLJET

If another wonder could be added to the Seven Wonders of the World, then the magnificent island of Mljet (pronounced "MLEE-ET") would certainly be on the shortlist.

Mljet is one of the most beautiful islands along the Croatian Adriatic coastline, and as there are over 1,200 islands to choose from this is high praise indeed. There are two different opinions, those who have dreamt of returning, and those who have heard about the island and make it a must visit.

Although just a short ferry ride away from Dubrovnik, it feels like you are miles away, centuries away, where time has stopped on this magical island. Mother nature surpassed herself when she created Mljet, its thick green forests, turquoise blue seas, and rich wildlife make this island a "must see" whilst in the region. The island stretches out like the back of a green whale dipping out of the blue Adriatic. Long and thin, Mljet is around 37 kilometres long, and has an average width of only 3 kilometres.

The northwestern end of the island is the home of Mljet National Park - the oldest marine protected area in the Mediterranean, founded on 11 November, 1960. It stretches over almost 5,400 hectares, including a marine area of 500 meters from the coast, islands, and cliffs, and therefore spans over almost a third of the island. Two deep bays filled with seawater, known as Malo Jezero and Veliko Jezero (Small Lake and Great Lake) are the most famous locations of this area, and an important geological and oceanographical phenomenon.

The larger lake contains a little isle with the 12th century monastery, St. Mary's; in fact, this is an island on an island. Catch the charming boat out to the island. The thick forests on Mljet gently descend all the way to the surface of the lakes, thus creating an image of unspoiled nature, where pine trees lean over the lake edge.

This harmony between abundant nature and rich heritage produces a feeling of tranquillity that brings visitors back. Walking and biking trails weave in and out of the forest and follow the lakes shoreline, truly an unforgettable bike ride. Mountain trails lead to stunning sightseeing points that overlook the surrounding islands. The therapeutic benefits of peaceful relaxation are ensured by kilometres of shoreline along the lakes and sea front around the island. It is the place where people keep coming back to stay for as long as their otherwise busy lives allow them.

Mljet might begin with the national park, but it certainly doesn't end there. A road runs through the centre of the island, one of the few roads on this Mediterranean island, and you'll experience breathtaking panoramas, sheer cliff drops, and picture postcard hamlets. A real Robinson Crusoe experience!

HOMER AND ODYSSEY

According to legend, Odysseus sailed in this region and spent seven years on the island on his way home from the Trojan Wars. The legend then continues that the beautiful goddess Calypso kept Odysseus as her lover and her prisoner in his cave - Odysseus Cave – which can be found on the north side of Mljet. The story states that his ship was destroyed in heavy seas, and he swam for his life to the nearest land. Out of the rolling waves a hole opened up before him in the land, the sea entrance to the cave. He swam through the entrance and into a tunnel cave before re-emerging in the sunlight in the safety of the open cave and land.

The Odysseus Cave is seldom seen by tourists, and the people of Mljet seem to want to keep this island secret to themselves. Who can blame them, or who can blame Odysseus for staying on Mljet for so long? Whether the legend of Odysseus, or Ulysses as he is known in Roman myths, is based on truth will never be known. What is known is that the Ancient Greeks knew about the island of Mljet, and there is evidence dating back to the 4th century B.C in which the Greeks write about the island.

From the adults-only Marin Pool to the exclusive VIP Beach Sun Gardens Dubrovnik is an ideal setting to unwind in the Croatian sun. And there are plenty of reasons why we love the sun – for one, the experts say that it boosts levels of serotonin and produces vitamin D which is good for our bones, teeth and skin. But to avoid the unwanted effects such as premature ageing, you need to protect your skin.

You may already know how important it is to wear sunscreen daily to block the rays and protect your skin, but don't forget that food and supplements can also help increase the skin's resiliency to the sun.

Protecting your face and body with the right cream for your skin type is crucial, but exposure to the sun's rays without protection can quickly cause serious damage to your hair as well. Cover up your hair with a hat and use protective hair oil spray for full and vibrant hair even after the holiday. Once you've get in from the sun, rinse off the sun cream with a cold shower and apply after-sun protection for maximum hydration. To keep your eye area safe choose sunglasses with polarised lens.

Now when you and your loved ones are protected don't forget few general rules. Minimize sun exposure between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m., reapply sunscreen after swimming and don't forget to have fun!

Check our Rosetta Health and Beauty store to find the perfect products for any of your sun protection needs.

GOURMET DELIGHTS: THE MEDITERRANEAN HERBS OF DALMATIA

Dalmatian cuisine is one of the healthiest in the world, so healthy in fact that its Mediterranean Diet was inscribed as intangible UNESCO heritage back in 2013.

With the abundance of fresh Adriatic fish, quality olive oil and an abundance of fresh seasonal produce, it is little wonder that tourists are stunned by the simplicity of Dalmatian food and its mouth-watering tastes concocted from simple, but age-old recipes passed down by grandmothers.

At the heart of Dalmatian cuisines are the essential ingredients which add flavour to these timeless dishes – its Mediterranean herbs. So prevalent are herbs in the Dalmatian way of life that they appear in food, in medicines, in decorations, and some even have entire festivals dedicated to them.

And they appear in rakija. Croatians make their beloved strong liquor using all sorts of natural ingredients available to them, and many types of herb contribute to the unique Dalmatian flavours of the hard stuff. Sage rakija, for example, is very popular, while you will not find a more aromatic drop of the hard stuff than lavender rakija.

But it is in the cuisine of Dalmatia where the Mediterranean herbs make their biggest mark. Herbs such as lavender, basil, oregano, bay leaves, rosemary, sage and thyme grow in the Dubrovnik region. And while back home, one might visit the supermarket to pick up your herbal requirement, here in Dalmatia, the traditional way is simply to pop out into the garden to pick the required number of leaves of the plant. Total freshness, one of the culinary secrets of Dalmatian cuisine.

Some herbs, such as basil, feature regularly in the simple salads of the region, such as tomato and basil salad, a fresh and flavoursome accompaniment to any lunch, while others are core ingredients in some of Dalmatia's most traditional dishes. Dalmatia's best loved meat dish, the delicious slow-cooked paštica with gnocchi, owes part of its unique flavours to the mandatory addition of bay leaves and thyme, for example, while a sprig or two of rosemary can always be found in the Dalmatian peka, a meat and octopus dish slow-cooked under an iron bell with potatoes and a variety of vegetables.

As with rosemary, parsley is an omnipresent ingredient in many Dalmatian dishes – expect to find a little in anything from octopus salad and black risotto to the fish stew known as Gregada. Some Mediterranean herbs play an important part in seasoning food far beyond the borders of Dalmatia, such as Dalmatian sage, whose slightly bitter aroma and pungency is effective in the seasoning of meat, particularly poultry, veal and pork roasts, as well as being an excellent ingredient in stuffing.

Simple freshness, aromatic herbs, traditional family recipes – three secrets of the magnificence of Dalmatian cuisine.
